SAMPLE LETTER: EXPERIENCED

Dear Studio Owner,

I am writing to apply for the Senior Bridal Makeup Artist position at [Organisation name]. Your studio's natural, skin-first bridal looks are close to my own style, and I would like to join a team that handles a large number of weddings with consistent quality.

I have seven years of experience, the last four as a freelance bridal artist in Jaipur, where I handle around 50 weddings a season, including destination weddings at heritage hotels. Most of my bookings come through referrals from past brides and wedding planners. I am known for long-wear bases that stay fresh through day-long ceremonies in dry heat, and for keeping looks connected across mehendi, haldi, wedding and reception so the bride never looks like a different person in each.

I also train and manage two assistants and have run small self-makeup workshops for bridesmaids. Every bride gets a trial, a patch test for new products and a written list of what I used, which clients with sensitive skin especially appreciate.

I can join from the start of next season and am happy to travel for outstation weddings. My portfolio of bridal work, arranged by ceremony and skin tone, is attached.

Thank you for your consideration. I would be glad to do a trial on one of your models.

Regards,

[Your name]

SAMPLE LETTER: FRESHER

Dear Salon Manager,

I am applying for the Junior Makeup Artist position at [Organisation name]. A busy unisex salon is where I want to build my skills, because working with walk-in and appointment clients every day will give me steady practice across skin types, ages and occasions.

I recently completed a six-month professional makeup course at an academy in Chandigarh, covering skin preparation, colour correction, HD and airbrush makeup and basic hairstyling. After the course, I assisted a senior bridal artist for one wedding season, working on around 25 weddings. I prepped skin, handled draping and touch-ups for bridesmaids and family members, and learnt how to keep a kit organised when the schedule changes at the last minute.

I follow strict hygiene practices: I sanitise brushes between clients, use disposable applicators for lips and eyes, and always ask about allergies and do a patch test before trying new products on sensitive skin.

My portfolio, including before-and-after photos taken with client consent, is attached. I am available to join immediately and can work weekends and early-morning bookings during the wedding season.

Thank you for considering my application. I would be happy to do a trial look for your team.

Regards,

[Your name]

BEFORE YOU SEND IT

- Attach a compact PDF portfolio arranged by look type and skin tone, and confirm client photos were used with consent; lightly edited photos build more trust than heavily filtered ones.
- Mention your hygiene routine, patch testing and allergy checks in one sentence; salon owners and brides both worry about skin reactions and want that reassurance early.
- State your availability plainly, including weekends, early calls, wedding season dates and outstation travel, since these often decide a booking more than the products you carry.
- Name your course or certification once, but leave out long lists of brands in your kit; employers care more about technique, speed and how the look holds through the event.
